Getting to know John Ricci of Ricci Construction Group

John Ricci

How I got my start as a builder...

I started working with my dad and always had an interest in how things went together.

My path was influenced by...

The many talented craftsmen that surrounded me when I was growing up.

I built my first home...

In Cheshire.

Who I am most inspired by...

There are a couple of different architects that inspire me because they have a true appreciation for the art of architecture.

My greatest strength as a builder...

My foresight enables me to see beyond the trees from the very beginning of a project through its completion.

My proudest building experience...

The one that I really learned the most from and I believe peaked as a builder was probably the reconstruction and modification of the Hartford Train Station.

I spend my downtime...

Farming and having an appreciation for the great outdoors.

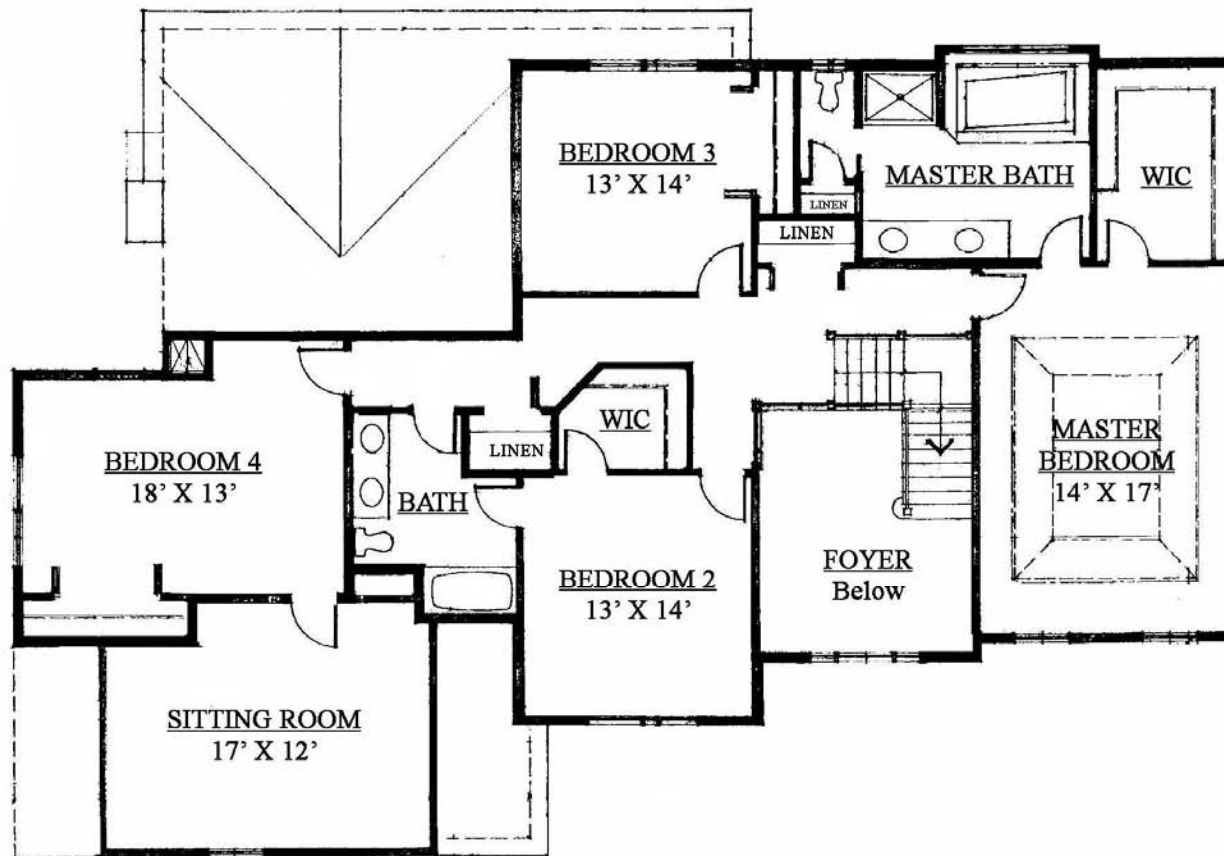

People would be surprised to learn that...

I raised game birds in my youth.

I want homebuyers to remember me and their buying experience...

As being easy to work with and that I pay attention to detail. I want them to feel as though they received a quality product and that they got their monies worth. I treat my customers the way that I would like someone to treat me.
